Secretary of War Baker yesterday made the following statement in regard to the manpower bill now being debated in the Congress:

"It is the policy of the War Department to call last, as far as practical, the men from 18 to 19, as I told the Senate Committee. I hoped that the Congress would not make the law so in-elastic as to make it impossible for us to call the 18 to 19 men until we could certify definitely that we had exhausted the other ages, because the long-drawn-out processes of classifying and deferring men may take so long that we can never tell when we have absolutely finished with the other ages. My plan was to defer the call of the 18 to 19 men as far as practicable, and I hoped that the Congress would not make their law any more inelastic than that.

"According to Gen. Crowder's figures, it will-not be possible to have eighty divisions abroad by July 1 without using the 18 to 19 men. Gen. Crowder's figures are, of course, estimates. "No change in the work-or-fight regulation is at present contemplated."

Although beyond the draft age, the young man quit his position as second officer aboard a Pacific Mail Steamship Company passenger boat plying between San Francisco and Panama, and responded to the cell of the colors. When only fifteen years old, he had chilisted as a naval apprentice and received his sea training at the training station on Gost Island in San Francisco harbor, serving aboard various warships until his term of chilistment expired when he was twenty-ope. At that time he held the rank as first-class quarter-

While stationed as quartermaster aboard the destroyer Paul Jones a year or so before his term expired, young Stevens was one of the crew of four that broke the world's record with a six-pounder at Panama during fleet target practice. The Paul Jones was awarded the trophy on that occasion, and each member of its gun crew was given a bonus of H a month for two years thereafter.

The commission also holds that the mains in the city streets are of sufficient size for domestic purposes, but not to furnish pressure and volume through fire plugs for fire protection purposes.
